

February 24, 2014

EMMA HACK: UNDERCOVER AT REBECCA HOSSACK ART GALLERY

MUSÉE'S TWITTER FEED

Musée Magazine RT
@pecho : Check out @MuséeMagazine 's
wonderful new issue:
FANTASY - available
in print via Pecho:
<http://t.co/ak1w5s5t/>
/
<http://t.co/ak1w5s5t/>
3 days · reply · retweet · favorite

Musée Magazine RT
@apertureind :
Matthew Pillbury:
City Stages—on view through Mar 27—is featured in @MuséeMagazine

twitter
join the conversation
By: Dallas Web Designers

MUSÉE'S INSTAGRAM FEED

Emma Hack's work is entirely unique. She has come to popular prominence with her work in so and so's video "Somebody that I used to know". The work in Undercover is brilliant, not only did the gallery host a live body painting before the show, but the small space created an intimate atmosphere for Hack's unique brand of portraiture. Hack takes models and body paints them to blend in to the background, eyes and teeth peek out, body lines are visible but only upon further examination.

The show runs until March 12th.

Text by John Hutt

Emma Hack, the artist

Copyright Emma Hack, Fans, 2013
Courtesy Rebecca Hossack Gallery

Image from the body-painting demonstration before the reception opening
Courtesy Rebecca Hossack Gallery

Image from the body-painting demonstration before the reception opening
Courtesy Rebecca Hossack Gallery